

Avalon Document Services Announces Acquisition of Spaulding Law Printing

Syracuse, N.Y., December 15, 2014 - Avalon Document Services announced today that it will continue its Appellate Division growth through the acquisition of local appellate printer Spaulding Law Printing. With the procurement of this longtime industry leader, Avalon has increased its commitment to serving their clients in the law practice sector.

In 2014, Avalon's Syracuse location has added team member depth for appellate projects and remains optimistic that the growth will continue with the projected influx of business from the Spaulding Law Printing clients. Avalon's President and Co-Owner Shawn Thrall said "Our team will continue to grow stronger and we are excited to provide more employment opportunities to the community as a result of this addition."

Spaulding Law Printing was a locally owned and operated appellate company in Syracuse and was the oldest appellate printer in Upstate New York, providing services to law firms for the past 75 years. During the transition, Spaulding Law Printing will retain its name under the Avalon Document Services parent name.

Alexander Douglas, former President of Spaulding Law Printing, took over the company 30 years ago and has become an expert in appellate services since. Douglas will work as a consultant alongside Avalon's appellate division leader Matt Magill during the transitional period to introduce clients and provide a continuity of service that has been a hallmark of their relationship with Spaulding Law Printing over the years. Douglas added "I am working with Avalon to ensure that my clients will continue to receive everything from Avalon that they have come to expect from me over the past 30 years."

Thrall and fellow Co-Owner JP Midgley have great respect for Spaulding Law Printing's excellent reputation and longevity in the appellate business. Thrall adds "Of course we knew of their impeccable reputation and we were humbled and honored when Mr. Douglas contacted us to discuss the possibility of Avalon taking on his loyal client base. Now that the transaction is a reality we will not let these clients down. Our plan is to implement a seamless transition for them, and impress them with our high standards and excellent service."
